ABOUT ME

I am a second-year Computer Programming student at Izmir University of Economics. I see software development not as something to be memorized, but as a field that requires understanding the logic behind how systems work. I prefer not to move forward without fully understanding why and how a structure functions. Problems do not discourage me; instead, they motivate me to research, experiment, and develop different solutions. I aim to continuously improve myself through learning and, over time, become a highly skilled developer capable of creating productive, practical, and sustainable projects.
